

Imran Benson

Call: 2005

Overview

Imran is an experienced litigator who is well known for a robust but charming style of advocacy alongside responsive and highly personable client service. He enjoys working closely with his clients to find the right strategy to achieve their commercial goals and to build the best possible case. He focuses on professional liability, commercial litigation, costs and insurance disputes but is often sought out in other areas. He gives clear and straightforward advice even in the most complex and nuanced situations.

He is ranked in the legal directories for both professional negligence and costs and was nominated by both Legal 500 and Chambers and Partners as their Professional Negligence Junior of the Year for 2024 (having been nominated in 2023 by Legal 500 as well). He was in one of The Lawyer's Top 20 cases of 2024 in a major construction case and is in the same list for 2025 in a major group litigation claim. Imran is instructed by national, City and international law firms, as well as institutional clients and HNW individuals. He is regularly instructed on his own to go against KCs. On the heaviest cases he occasionally juniors to very experienced commercial silks (currently by KCs at Fountain Court and One Essex Court).

He is happy to work on a CFA/DBA basis in the right case. He also accepts direct public access instructions from sophisticated non-lawyers.

Professional liability

A substantial part of Imran's practice involves professional liability work focusing on lawyers, construction & property and financial professionals.

Lawyers

Imran's lawyer's liability practice is extensive. It typically includes: all kinds of property related disputes, fraud, litigation gone wrong and failed non-contentious transactions such as business sales, SPAs, tax avoidance, art purchases and wills claims. He is currently involved in several £multi-million group claims arising out of failed fractional ownership schemes (care homes, hotel rooms etc). He is acting in a £10m negligence claim against a leading regional firm alleging dishonest assistance by the conducting solicitor. He has sued well-known KCs. He spent the whole of November 2019 successfully defending a commercial law firm at trial in connection with an £8m claim arising from a company demerger.

Construction & Property

Imran has considerable construction professional expertise, acting for and against architects, engineers, clerks of works, cladding specialists, QS and more. For example he was instructed in a 3 month c.£100m TCC trial commencing in October 2024 (which featured in The Lawyer's Top 20) on behalf of the excess insurer of an insolvent architects practice about a vast mixed use development. He often deals with cases where there is an overlap of construction negligence, insurance issues and sometimes fraud.

Imran has a deep knowledge of the property professional sector. He spent 3 years as a member of the RICS Conduct and Appeals Committee, which disciplines RICS members and has first-hand experience of supervising the management of a substantial central London commercial estate.

He has acted in cases involving all the leading London based international real estate firms. This typically involves alleged negligent valuations of development sites with large GDVs (£1m - £120m) or valuations of industrial, retail, residential, office and alternative properties such as casinos, hotels, utilities, student housing and data centres. He deals in related claims involving LPA Receivers and distressed sales. He is currently defending a large valuers firm in connection with purpose built student accommodation valued at £16.5m.

His practice also includes complaints about advisory services and property management work. He has been instructed in a range of high value and complex claims (£20m - £60m) concerning the valuation of City of London office blocks and the effectiveness of associated debt securitisation.

Finance

Imran's work relating to financial professionals covers auditors, accountants, actuaries, business sales brokers, IFAs, insolvency practitioners, tax advisors (including investment scheme promoters), pension professionals and insurance brokers, corporate advisors.

Recent cases have involved defending an accountancy firm in a £5m claim connected with an MBO and acting for a business brokerage in a £6m deferred consideration dispute. He has considerable experience in claims involving inappropriate advice and investments, pensions professionals, claims involving private equity, inadequate accounts reporting, failed tax avoidance schemes, He acts both for and against such professionals and is adept at reading financial statements. Many of these claims involve cross claims against other professionals - in respect of which he has broad and deep experience.

Costs

Imran has a busy contentious and non-contentious costs practice typically involving City firms. Recent instructions have come from firms such as Herbert Smith, Weightmans, Macfarlanes and Crowell & Moring. He is often instructed to help negotiate and formalise complex fee arrangements at an early stage of a claim where there is a delicate dance between clients/lawyers/funders or when a major problem has surfaced. He attacks or defends such arrangements where necessary.

In particular he has a deep expertise in costs issues associated with group litigation/competition claims. For instance he acts for Mercedes/Herbert Smith Freehills in the NOx litigation, where costs of more than £500m were claimed.

He has appeared in a number of significant costs cases including the leading case at the Court of Appeal on non-party costs orders in the context of small family businesses and a large number of appeals arising from the endless reforms to the costs parts of the CPR.

He has acted and continues to act for High Net Worth individuals, assisting them and their staff with resolving litigation gone wrong situations. He brings a practical and highly responsive attitude to such cases – happy to deal with WhatsApp calls on a moments notice.

Imran also regularly deals with detailed assessments/preliminary points/item-by-item challenges both inter-partes and solicitor/client in the SCCO or elsewhere. He occasionally sits at the SCCO as a Deputy Costs Judge and has vast familiarity with all these issues.

Commercial law

Imran has a broad, busy and substantial company and commercial disputes practice. Typically this arises out of fraud, SPA disputes, failed domestic and international investments or general contractual or quasi-contractual disputes. He has acted for and against banks and financial institutions both large and small for many years. He is currently engaged in a £18m corporate fraud claim against a former CEO and FD. This has involved co-ordinating a WFO and Search & Imaging Order and ancillary applications in 10 overseas jurisdictions.

He acts in the full range of shareholder/director/D&O disputes. His long experience of working with insurers as well as dealing in company disputes has given him deep expertise in this area.

As examples of recent work:

- Van Zuylen v Whiston-Dew [2021] EWHC 2219 – commercial fraud case involving offshore trusts, FSMA 2000, breach of trust, breach of fiduciary duty and deceit. Widely reported in the Times and Daily Mail. Led by KC at Fountain Court.
- successful application under the Cross Border Insolvency Regulations 2006 for recognition of a foreign representative of main proceeding.
- Cool Seas v Interfish [2018] EWHC 2038 – 17 day trial before Rose J concerning a s.994 petition and cross-petition with cross allegations of fraud relating to a £multi-million business. Sole counsel against KC and Junior.
- acting for a group of claimants in the VW NOx Emissions Scandal Group Litigation.
- acting for Liechtenstein liquidators against English former directors claiming £20m.
- acting for investors in a failed AIM company bringing claims for deceit worth £several million against the controlling mind of the company – settled with full recovery shortly before trial in Jan 2022.
- an $87m claim concerning the sale of oil rigs to Iranian entities in breach of sanctions.

Imran regularly obtains and resists a wide range of injunctions: domestic and international freezers, search orders and employee anti-poaching injunctions.

He has a deep interest in the art market and has worked on matters concerning auctioneers, art ownership, theft and damage claims.

Insurance

Imran regularly acts in insurance disputes concerning coverage and brokerage.

Recent work has included advising a number of insureds in relation to BII Covid claims, a successful defence at arbitration of a declinature decision by a Legal Expense Insurer on the basis of (amongst other things) provocation by the insured. He has advised on aggregation rights arising out of innocent misselling of a fraudulent investment scheme. He regularly advises on the solicitor's and ICAEW minimum terms. He is involved in fights about successor practices.

He regularly advises on coverage and carries out coverage interviews. He successfully defended QBE on a declinature decision in an accountant's case both at arbitration and on subsequent appeal to the Commercial Court. He has overturned arbitration coverage decisions on the basis of breach of natural justice. He is currently acting as sole counsel in a dishonesty coverage arbitration worth in excess of £20m.

However, his insurance expertise is much broader. He has been involved in a number of fire/property damage claims, recovery claims and a full range of D&O disputes – especially involving fraud. He knows the importance of meticulous attention to detail and the need to take swift and robust action.

He has acted on disputes between broker and underwriter about commission, premium, validation and IPR. He has knowledge of (and indeed written a chapter on) Takaful (Islamic insurance). He acts in broker's negligence claims and is very familiar with the difficult tactical decisions to be made in such cases.

Arbitration and international

Imran has an arbitration practice involving both ad hoc and the commonly used rules. He has been to, amongst other places, Mauritius, the Middle-East and Channel Islands for professional reasons and is happy to travel where appropriate.

Cyber and information technology

Imran has recently seen a number of instructions involving crypto, cyber and technology matters. This relates to cyber fraud, SEO optimisation, alleged failures regarding IT contracts and website development problems. He is familiar with many of the technical and legal concepts which apply in this developing area. He has advised indemnity insurers about the consequences of data hacks at well known legal services providers. He acts in crypto fraud cases and is very familiar with the technical concepts.

Recent work has included domain name disputes, email interception, website development, fees disputes morphing into negligence claims and digital marketing problems (including social media influencer fraud).

Mediation

Imran is a CEDR Accredited Mediator and regularly mediates prof neg and/or costs disputes, using his extensive experience in these areas. He only mediates these kinds of disputes. He offers 4 hour and 1 day mediations (and a blind bidding service) on a fixed fee basis.
